* Before Detjen, Acting P.J., Franson, J. and Smith, J.

Appointed counsel for defendant Tashante Leeanna Anderson asked this court to review the record to determine whether there are any arguable issues on appeal. (People v. Wende (1979) 25 Cal.3d 436.) Defendant was advised of the right to file a supplemental brief within 30 days of the date of filing of the opening brief. More than 30 days elapsed, and we received no communication from defendant. Finding no arguable error that would result in a disposition more favorable to defendant, we affirm.

Defendant had a child together with the father. On March 26, 2018, the father was granted full custody of the child, and defendant was granted no visitation rights. On May 18, 2018, the father dropped off the child at defendant's mother's house for a birthday party. When he returned to pick up the child, the child was gone. Defendant's uncle told the father that defendant had taken the child. When the father called defendant, she told him she was taking the child with her to Georgia. She said the court papers the father had were not real. On May 24, 2018, defendant was located and arrested.

On June 5, 2018, defendant pled no contest to taking or concealing a child and maliciously depriving a lawful custodian of a right to custody (Pen. Code, § 278.5, subd. (a)). On July 3, 2018, the trial court granted defendant four years' probation with 365 days in jail, and the court suspended all but 25 of those days. The court awarded credit for time served, imposed various fines and fees, and issued a criminal protective order against defendant.

On July 5, 2018, defendant filed a notice of appeal, but did not request a certificate of probable cause.

Having undertaken an examination of the entire record, we find no evidence of ineffective assistance of counsel or any other arguable error that would result in a disposition more favorable to defendant.

DISPOSITION

The judgment is affirmed.
